Cyber Security: Protecting Your Confidential Information and Your Company

As technology has entered the workplace, along with it has come both practical and legal complications and liabilities that could not have been anticipated. Yet today, if a business does not take seriously how to protect its confidential information and data, that business is at ultimate risk. Join us for a conversation about these important issues from both a Cyber Security and Legal perspective in which we will discuss:

- Trends in lawsuits about protecting confidential information and data (what is protectable and not)
- Procedures business owners need to have in place from hire through fire to best position to protect confidential information (such as using employment agreements and internal policies as a tool)
- Which technologies should you permit your employees to use and how to protect the company interests when employees use your technology
- Why the hacker is not your only danger
- Cost effective ways to manage a company's risk and exposure
- Is Cyber Insurance the answer?
